- 20 Faculty members from 12 states + DC
  - history, religion, language/culture, language/literature, anthropology, sociology
  - 14 NCC Council members, 6 observers

- Presentations: NCC activities, MVS, commercial/free databases, Sharing research/classroom application

- Small group breakout sessions: listening to faculty needs
Mission 2: Expanding Digital Resources in the Classroom

Faculty Forum

About the NCC

◆ Who are the NCC’s customers, faculty, students and/or librarians?

◆ What does the NCC really do? The NCC activity needs more visibility among faculty and students

◆ Learning that NCC activities are very useful. Need more learning opportunities like the Faculty Forum
Mission 2: Expanding Digital Resources in the Classroom

Faculty Forum

About the Resources

◆ Need more materials for undergraduates/non-Japanese language specialists
◆ More English resources
◆ Need more assistance for teaching undergraduates
◆ Need more assistance for small Japanese programs
◆ Need films, e-books, gov documents, databases for small programs
Mission 2: Expanding Digital Resources in the Classroom

Faculty Forum

NCC web site: What is it? What should be?

- Who is it for?
- One stop shopping for resources, information exchanges, material sharing, interaction among scholars, librarians, etc.
- Access to “hidden” special collections
- Access to video

Kuwata Jiro's Bat-manga

Posted on March 16th, 2009 by Maureen Donovan

Entry Filed under: General

This year’s manga seminar just ended. As in past years, it seems like we were just getting into a stride. The end came too soon. Well all I can do at this point is start thinking about next year’s course. I asked the students for input and got some great ideas.

One of the questions I always face is about where to start, how far back to go in constructing this 1-credit, 10-week course. This time we started with Totoro’s Black Jack (OSU catalog). That was a big hit, so I’m going to keep it for next fall’s course. However, I am thinking to assign Kuwata Jiro’s Bat-manga (OSU catalog) as the first week’s reading. There is an interesting article about it on the Valdosta Daily Times website by Dean Poling, “COMICS: Batmanga”.

Meanwhile, Ohio State’s holdings of Kuwata Jiro’s works are expanding with the acquisition of the Manga Shop Series. We’ve received a grant from the North American Coordinating Council on Japanese Library Resources’ Multivolume Sets Project recently to purchase a second (circulating) copy of the first 130 volumes in that series — and OSU will continue to purchase a 2nd copy for volumes being published into the future. The second set is on order now. Meanwhile, Mayumi Kamata (GA working in the Cartoon Research Library) is already cataloging the first set that arrived about a month ago.
